Authorities Favor Wide Superimposed Highways for Nonstop Traffic

SEVERAL PROJECTS UNDERGO DISCUSSION

850,000,000 River-Front Plan May Make 140-Foot Thoroughfare Into Two Tiers

Cities throughout the United States are making vigorous efforts to free the motorcar from the entanglements of traffic congestion. to free the motorcar from the en-tanglements of traffic congestion. The following which is the tenth-of 18 articles, describes activities in Missouri, Wisconsin, and Towa.

BIRCIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO ST. LOUIS, Mo. City authorities here are turning to the new vogue of double-deck and elevated roadways for nonstop motor traffic to help solve the automobile control problem. Their new plans follow completion of the Olive Street widening, costing around $3,000,000, as the first step in providing better arteries for business travel. A $50,000,000 river-front improve ment, already approved by the city plan commission, would convert Third Street into a double-deck traffic way 140 feet wide, and provide an expansive parking space for antomobiles down town. This plan would make possible a swift passage to down-town St. Louis from the north and south parts of the city, and would revive a district along the Mississippi which has fallen into decay.

Expect to Speed Up Traffic Two 100-feet-wide thoroughfares would converge into this widened Third Street, one entering from the north and northwest and the other from the south and southwest of the city. In these thoroughfares elevated city. In these thoroughfares elevated roadways would be constructed having capacity for six lines of high-speed non-stop traffic.

Lower levels of a proposed great river front plaza would be utilized for public parking space and garage and other traffic requirements. The Third Street high level foadway would be directly connected with the upper decks of the Municipal bridge crossing the Mississippi. bridge crossing the Mississippi.

Like most cities whose business districts are in the oldest part of town, St. Louis' down-town streets are comparatively narrow. Owing to the additional fact that the husiness district lies to the extreme east, near the river, while the great residential development in recent years has been

Lake Erosion Eats Miles of Real Estate

Control of Michigan Water's Rising by Breakwaters Advised by Prof. Ball

CHICAGO—The waves of Lake Michigan have consumed 10 square miles of real estate on the west shore between Evanston. Ill. and Manitowoc, Wis, in the last 100 years, it is reported by John R. Ball, assistant professor of geology and paleontology at Northwestern University. In recent weeks the waves, due to rising lake levels, have at times made the outer drives in the park systems impassable in Chicago and vicinity, and attacked the foundations of coast guard stations, apartment houses and other water-front works.

as a memorial to that grand lodge. The Missouri Grand Lodge volun-teered to raise $25,000 toward the Landscape Work Started

At the annual meeting of the assoclation which was held in the auditorium of the Temple, $153,000 was turned in to be added to the $112,009 already on hand, which brings the int contributed during the nine to $2,690,822.28-an average of $291,-

During the past year, it was shown considerable progress had been made, the Memorial having been extended from an elevation of 83 feet 6 inches to 110 feet. This means that the structure was continued from the top of the tower base up to and including a part of the first unit of the tower, including the entire fourth tower, including the entire fourth floor and the first section of the pilasters of the unit specified.

Several rooms are now ready or inside finish, the terracing, leading up, to the Temple proper has been completed, outside workmen are now engaged in grassing and planting and in and about the several apart-ments of the Temple other workmen are "putting things in shape for the ts of summer visitors

Stands on Commanding Site

The memorial stands on a commanding site on Shooters Hill, a part of Arlington Ridge, on the main road between Washington, D. C., and George Washington's old home at Mount Vernon. From its towers the city of Washington can be plainly een, while the tip of its spire can e seen from Mount Vernon. It is built on the spot once picked by Jefferson and Adams for the national Capitol—a project vetoed by Presi-dent Washington because he owned other property in the vicinity and he wished to obviate any criticism on that account Almost at the foot of the memoria Almost at the foot of the memorial lies the city of Alexandria, in which is located the Masonic Lodge of which Washington was the first Mas-ter, and many other historic points of interest. Westward is the Episcopai Theological Seminary; south is Cameron Valley, where are located several old Virginia homesteads; and across the valley is Mount Eagle, home of Lord Fairfax.

The design of the memorial by Washington's life.

across the valley is Mount Eagle, home of Lord Fairfax.

The design of the memorial, by Helme & Corbett, of New York City, is derived from the ancient towers which were used as beacons to guide mariners into the harbor, such as that at the ancient city of Rhodes. The entrance to the structure is through a portice of eight Doric columns, the whole a unit of pure Greek architecture. This will lead into the great antrium, comprising the main central room of the structure and forming the memorial hall, in which will be set a statue of Washington of heroic size.

"The George Washington Memo-rial," explained Mr. Watres recently, "is more than a memorial. It is a monument to Freemasonry, a monument to civil and religious liberty and to a stable, orderly and constitutional government. It will proclaim to the world that Washington's sentinel ideals still guard the imperishable purposes by which his great career was governed, ideals that constitute Because he lived and because of his achievements every foot of American soil is sacred and every American is richer in the things that count for more than material wealth. course of his address he declared that the Masonic fraternity had been most helpful in the development of his country. Modern Freemasonry had become particularly active immediately preceding the present constitutional regime as had been the case with the republics of the United States and of France. Contrasting the growth of the fraternity under the two governing organizations, the Sultanic and democratic, the Ambassador deemed it evident that the system Freemasonry has some vestiges in America from 1696. There were home and Philadelphia, Pa., in 1733, and how much dearlier one cannot say. How many years before that time and how regular the earlier lodges were is a matter for further research.

Some 26,565 Masonic lodges are of general recognition by United States, 2415 not so authoritatively Known, a total of 28,977 in the world. The athletic actilities are extensive. A natatorium lined with Spanish majolica tile, and lighted by sunshine gives a tropical setting for the Pires Endowment Corporation which is divided each year among the Ma-sonic bodies at Dallas, Texas, in which the donor, Brother Pires, once and Mystic Shrine is given for the care of children. The bodies of the York Rite divide their share among a number of worthy institutions of relief, education and charity. The amount for the York Rite bodies this year is $5000 and was given to Baydor deemed it evident that the system of absolutism practiced by the succession of sultans could not logically accommodate itself to an institution like Freemasonry.

The exterior of the building is commanding. Its Saracenic dome and minaret atop the fortieth story give a new note to Michigan Avenue, the business boulevard upon which it stands. Another unusual feature is a high sculptured frieze which girdles the building above the ninth story.

In its symbolism it is of special in-terest to Freemasons. King Solomon is seated upon his throne. To him comes an architect with plans for the building of the temple. Another panel depicts the sacrifice which dedicates the building. Heralds and torchbearers and maidens make up a ritualistic procession. Assyrian my-thology is drawn on for other symbolic figures.

There's an amusing little secret hidden in the frieze Leon Hermant, the sculptor, did not confess it until his work was finished and the relief in its place. Then he admitted that when he came to chisel the architect in that country and recently paid a fraternal visit to the Bethesda Lodge No. 204 at Bethesda, Md. Girl Scout movement has been fol-lowed. Materials for bloomers and middies should at all times be considered in the light of climatic changes. For example, hot days find chambray, plain gingham, or cotton broadcloth more comfortable than beavy unbleached muslin or drill. Brisk but not cold weather brings khak! forward as the ideal fabric both as regards weight and color.

Practical Fabrics

Cool wet weather demands warm but light-weight materials, such as fiannel, jersey or a medium dressweight tweed. Neutral colors are invariably first choice with experienced campers for reasons which the inexperienced may overlook.

Practically all of the representative pattern companies issue a camping suit on the order of the one adopted by the Camp Fire Girls. Middles are, of course, inexpensive, but if the trunk packing for camp is to bring a high degree of satisfaction to the girl who sews well, she will surely plan to work out several of these easy-to-make outfits. For a girl from 16 to 18 years the Unofficial camping usually invites much informal visiting and this fact brings about the temptation to take more clothes along than the official camps permit. It is a safe rule, however, to adopt the strictly common-sense reasoning of "out with the non-essentials" and a system that accepts the steamer trunk as first aid in the enforcing of this rule. No mat-ter how temptingly one's silk dresses may urge another solution of the wardrobe problem, resolutely turn the suggestion down, inasmuch as garments of silk have a way of showing discoloration, mildew or spotting from sea air, or protracted periods of dampness. cisely, and we seldom stop to think. For the most part we attribute civilization to times and countries recognizably like our own, using ourselves as the standard of measurement in this as in al. other excellence; but those to whom this convenient criterion has come to seem a little naive and not quite adjustable to all occasions are forced to do a little thinking. Civilization is not the same thing as modernity, they see, for there is ancient Expyt to be considered. When they study the literature and ceramics and gainting of China's Ming Dynasty it does not seem to depend upon geographical position, as so many people of the western world cheerfully assume. Neither is it identical with the possession and use of "modern conveniences," which the artists and orators and statesmen of Periclean Athens did so nobly without. The word and the ideas it connotes need clarifying, and in default of any better definition perhaps we may say that a civilized time or country or person is one that has learned to converse.

Before we cap be quite fair to this definition we must see how much it implies. When we consider that true teconversation is the social archange or mingiling of individual thoughts and moods, it becomes clear that Repentance, reformation, and regeneration, without which Jesus said one could not enter the kingdom of heaven, are all necessary stages of progress if one would reach perfection. For those who are willing to undertake the subjugation of material selfhood, what a glorious privilege it is to follow in the steps of our beloved Way-shower, and to strive to be perfect, even as our Father in heaven is perfect!

There is nothing toilsome in this task if we are willing and obedient in carrying out the instructions laid down for us. Only if we stray from the path of consecrated endeavor will the steps which may need to be retraced seem painful and slow; but whenever the vision of the kingdom of heaven is cherished in thought, anticipation speeds our footsteps; and the admonition, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," encourages all to press on to its fulfillment.

Lewis Broad and Violet M. Broad have performed a monumental task of scholarship in thus assembling many diverse facts about Mr. Shaw's published writings, together with a complete bibliography of his works and of the literature con-cerning him, and a record of the principal Shavian play productions. Mr. Shaw's lectures appeared, as well as his scores of fugitive articles on socialism, the drama, politics, antivivisection, woman suffrage, phonetics, taxation, prison reform, labor, censorship, poor law reform, ration-alized spelling, and other topical subjects that have steadily engaged his attention. authorized biography of G. Bernard Shaw, first published in 1911, has made an ingenious synthesis of Mr. Shaw's own sayings in explanation of his writings. This "imaginary sym-posium in the neo-Socratic manner" econciles his many remarks about his artistic and social viewpoints that have often seemed contradictory, not to say impish, to those who "don't get Shaw." Opinions expressed in conversations spread over 40 years, Mr. Shaw is represented as voicing at a sitting of half an hour in a talk participated in by Mr. Henderson, William Archer, A. B. Walkley, and Henrik Ibsen.

All the personages are neatly char-acterized, with Archer and Walkley as irreconcilable as ever in their complaints that Shaw wrote conversa tions rather than plays, and Ibsen frostily repudiating the author of "The Quintessence of Ibsenism." When Haldane was driven from office in 1915 by the clamor of a warexited public, he left behind him the finest army of its size on earth. Prevented by circumstances of war from defending his actions, he waited in the shadows.

One evening, the war at an end, he was seated alone in his study, when—to quote Lord Haldane—"the door was opened and who should enter but Field Marshal Douglas Haig, come from a triumphant ride with his Sovereign along the Mall. The Centenary Tolstoy

English edition of Tolstoy's works is a fitting celebration of the recent Tolstoy centenary. The preparation of the centenary edition has been appropriately intrusted to Ayimer Maude, who has done so much to make Tolstoy known to the Anglo-Saxon world; and Mr. Maude's biography of Tolstoy, originally published in 1908-1910 and now revised and enlarged, is to occupy two introductory volumes, the first of which is before us. Full use has been made of recently published material, and the reader who is unable to go to the original sources may congratulate himself on the possession of a complete and competent account in English of Tolstoy's life.

Inevitably, of course, the book dates. Twenty years ago, when it first appeared, it was customary in Europe and America to regard Tolstoy less as a novelist than as a prophet; and few were aware of the contrary view which had already become general in Russia. Mr. Maude knew Tolstoy intimately in his later years, when the great novelist had deliberately rejected his art and few were and to win their confidence; and in "A Landlord's Morning" he depicted his own efforts and his own deptitudes of the prejudices of the prejudices of the struggle to translate his ideals into predicted in or the facilie remorse with which he arrates his grosser lapses; but the facile remorse with which he facile remorse with whic reflection of his own failures which inturiated him in others.

General Gas and Electric Corporation

Use of Electricity Grows

Times Faster Than Population

Since 1900, the population of the United States has increased 56%—the use of electricity 3400%.

In the territory served by companies in which the General Gas and Electric Corporation has substantial interests, the use of electricity has grown at a rapid rate. In the territory served by its operating properties the use of electricity has increased 78% from 1925 to 1928-a rate even more rapid than that for the country

> A Third of Population Still Lives in Unwired Homes

The use of electricity will unquestionably continue to grow at a rapid pace for many years to come.

Over one-half of the wired homes are still without any domestic appliance except the flat iron.

Over 90% are without electric refrigeration.

Over 95% are without electric ranges.

88% of the farms and 35% of industry are still without central station service.

98% of the railroad mileage remains to be electrified.

The growth period is an investment period with opportunities never equalled at any other time in the history of an industry. The General Gas and Electric Corporation with large holdings in widely diversified public utility enterprises and operating properties in Florida and South Carolina, together with other possible and probable acquisitions, will share largely in the continued growth of the public utility industry.

Business news continued favorable, from Age reported that "steel output is undiminished, and signs of a decline in mill bookings are by no means marked, pointing out that "a further tapeasag of specifications in the automobile adustry is offisel, at least in part, by fresh demands from other sources." United States Steel common was nevertheless under steady selling pressure, selling down nearly 5 points to 1613, which contrasts with the years high of 1937s.

While Wail Street believes that 6 per cent sediscount rates will only foring them in line with other monetary accommoditions, fears are felt in some quarters that they will have a depressing effect on business and hold up new projects which have-to be financed with borrowed money. Veteran market observers pointed out that the action of the market indicated that it was "overbought" and that there was not sufficient fresh buying power to check the forced liquidation, which came into the market, although brokessure accounts generally are well markined. The severe declines in some of the recent speculative favorites necessitated markin calls, which many traders were either unwilling or unable to meet.

General Electric dropped 10% points, Baldwin Locomotive 10, Allied Chemical 9, Goodycar Rubber 712, and United Aircraft, Burroughs Adding Machine, American & Foreign Powgr, Packard Motors, Westinghouse Electric, Delaware & Hudson, Federal Mining & Smelting, Warner Brothers Pictures, Curtiss Aeronautical, Commercial Credit and International Telephone sold down 5 to 6 points, Case Threshing moved up 414 points to 350 and then soared to a new low for the year at 350, Auburn Auto) on the other hand, dropped 8 to 38 and then soared to a new high record at 2553, Columbia Gas also moved into new high ground.

More than a score issues, including many of the popular automobile and merchandising shares sank to new low levels for the year; General Motors sold down 4 points to a new low at 74 before it met-effective buying support.

Several of the oils rallied 1 to 2½ points in the mid-day rally in that gram but they failed to hold their

of 2 points to a decline of 1 point. Covering by May shorts seemed responsible for the relatively steady rulling of old crop months, while there may have been a little buying in anticipation of a bullish weekly weather report.

The advance to 19.70 for May attracted freer offerings, and after the initial demand for that position had been supplied, prices eased under realizing or liquidation promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and reports of more favorable weather in the South,
July sold off from 18.88 to 18.80, with the general market showing net declines of about 4 to 6 points at the end of the first hour.

Private cables reported Bombay selling in the Liverpool market.

FEDERAL RESERVE RATE OF SIX PER CENT RECOMMENDED

WASHINGTON-Federal Advisory

WASHINGTON—Federal Advisory
Council has recommended to the Federal Reserve Board that reserve banks be permitted to raise their rediscount rates to 6 per cent, as these banks request this action.

The council believes that improvement in financial conditions and consequently reduction in the rate will in this way be brought about more quickly. Thus best safeguarding commerce, industry and agriculture."

This decision was announced after an all-day discussion at length of the credit situation. At 6 p. m. Tuesday the board gave out, without comment, council's memorandum urging approval of raises in rates, whenever recommended by reserve banks as a means of bringing those rates "into closer relation with generally prevailing commercial money rates."

Belief prevails that the reserve board will act in due season in accordance with the recommendations and that rates shortly will be advanced in ance with the recommendations and that rates shortly will be advanced in New York, Chleago, Boston and Philadelphia, to be followed by like action in the other eight districts.

These four banks are understood to

These four banks are understood to have sought repeatedly in recent months to raise their rates, meeting Reserve Board refusal. That the board immediately gave publicity to conclusions of the council supports prevailing opinion that rates will soon be raised to 6 per cent.

WASHINGTON (P) — George L. Harrison. governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and Gates W. MacGarrah, chairman of the board of directors of the New York Federal Reserve Bank and Federal Reserve Bank and Federal Reserve Board and with Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury. No word was forthcoming as to what was discussed at the conferences, but their presence here following what was discussed at the conferences, but their presence here following action of the Federal Advisory Council in recommending the permitting of an increase in Federal Reserve Bank re-discount rates, led to reports that this was the cause of their visit.

North and South American Corporation has been organized under the laws of Delaware by American Founders Corporation, A. G. Becker & Co., and Baker, Kellogg & Co., Inc., who compose the Management Group, for the purpose of acquiring equity investments in foreign countries and the United States, and to aid investing companies and other financial institutions in the management of their portfolios in consideration of fees or the acquisition of equity interests in such institutions. It will also originate investments, principally in South America, for institutions that are associated with it, and for distribution in this and foreign markets. Its purpose is to extend activities of this character heretofore carried on by the houses identified with its management. The recent large growth of investing companies in this country provides a broad and permanent field for the services rendered by a corporation of this character. The Corporation will also deal in securities for its own account and participate in syndicates formed for the purpose of underwriting the sale and distribution of securities.

The foregoing is subject to the more complete statements contained in the circular, a copy of which may be obtained upon request.

The Management Group has agreed to purchase for $1,000,000 in cash all of the Class B Stock to be presently outstanding. The Corporation will receive not less than $9,125,000 in cash for the Class A Stock and Class B Stock to be presently outstanding. A substantial portion of this issue has been subscribed for by interests associated with the Management Group.

We offer this stock when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to prior sale and to approval of counsel. It is expected that temporary certificates will be deliverable in the first instance.

The Class A Common Stock has been admitted to trading on a when, as and if basis on the Chicago Stock Exchange. Application will be made to list it on the Boston Stock Exchange.

Yorkshire Sets Out

Yorkshire then set out to pass it rival on the first innings total I looked as if it would when eigh Any doubt as to where the chief power les in the West is rapidly being dispensed with as the Cubs and Cardinals continually subdue the Reds and Pirates. During the last, three days the western teams have absorbed practically all the spotlight, for only one game has been played in the West. Weather continues to cause while six have been played in the West. Weather continues to cause astern postponements.

In the fourth inning Hafey's home run with a man on base figured in the seven-run rally of the Cardinals. In that inning, the Cardinals knocked two pitchers out of the box. High, with a double and two singles, led the batters, while Walker's hitting for Cincinnati deserves honorable mention. He knocked out a home run and a single. Kolp made his first start for Cincinnati ince April and it was an in auspicious one. He lasted less than four innings. He made 42 and York-shire's innings ended with 347, Herbert Sutcliffe contributing 69. M. W. Leysand on the second knock produced 127 runs at the cost of three wickets. A strong contrast was afforded by Surrey's game against Nottingham shire, Surrey's hopes were raised by Willis Walker hitting 115, Freederick Barratt 91, Harold Larwood 53 with fall of their hosts' wickets cheaply at the start, but were lowered steadily by Willis Walker hitting 115, Freederick Barratt 91, Harold Larwood 54 with the was a find on the second innings contrast was afforded by Surrey's game against Nottingham shire, Surrey's hopes were raised by Willis Walker hitting 115

Cvengros was given a chance to start for the Cuos but he was knocked out of the box in the fifth inning. Horne and Root, however, held Pittsburgh safe the rest of the game and the Cubs overcame a four-run margin to win $ to 6 and maintain their bare lead of one-half a game over the Cardinals in the standing.

Hornsby's home run in the fifth with a man on base gave the Cubs renewed vigor to go ahead and win the game. French, Pittsburgh's young recruit pitcher, did well for four innings but the sixth saw him taken out. It was his first defeat in four starts and the first time he has had to have relief. Who: COPERNICUS

Where: Poland, Prussia and Italy When: Fifteenth to sixteenth cen-

Why famous: A great Polish astronomer, founder of a new system of astronomy. He was the child of a Polish father and of a German mother, born in Poland and given his first lessons there. He later studied at Cracow, then went to Italy, where at Bologan Padua and Form where, at Bologna, Padua and Fer-rara, he continued his study of mathematics, canon law, medicine and astronomy. By 1505 he was in Prussia, where most of his latter years were spent at Frauenburg.

At that time popular understand-ing with regard to the solar system was dominated still by the theories of Ptolemy. That is, people believed that the earth was the center of that system and that the sun and all the stars revolved about the earth. But Copernicus was not altogether con vinced by this theory. He had learned that the ancient Greeks had entertained the possibility of the earth itself being in motion. Hence he con-tinued his meditations and his observations of the heavens at night, until he arrived finally at the star-tling conclusion that the earth was tem, and that all the planets revolved about the sun, the earth one among many. Moreover, he explained that the reason people thought that the stars went round their earth each day was because the earth was itself revolving upon its own axis. Thus Inside the package was a big envelope, with flowers and fruits printed in lovely colors on the outside. There also were a small rake, a morning voice.

"He has two horns on his head, this dig eyes, hoofs on his feet and a lorg tail," was John's answer.

There also were a small rake, a morning voice. copernicus invited his contemporaries to accept truths to which the evidences of their material senses did not testify. Although a cardinal had encouraged him to write his great transfer will be represented by the content of the co treatise, "De Orbium coelestium Revolutionibus," published in 1543, and though that treatise had been dutifully dedicated to the Pope, yet theo-logians rose up en masse to reject the Copernican theory, declaring that the Copernican theory, declaring that it conflicted with the Scriptures. To-day we realize that Copernicus was right, that he revolutionized the world's thought about the solar system. He labored patiently toward this end during the greater part of his life, by the aid only of the crudest wooden instruments marked with ink. For the telescope was not to be to the air or atmosphere. It comes to us through the Latin aer, "air," from the Greek word ἀής (aer), "air," whence the Greek prefix rela-tive to air, as our English "aero." In its relation to air, "aerial" is used, meaning light as air, airy, or thin as air, ethereal, or produced by or in air, atmospheric, or existing or moving in air, floating or placed aloft, elevated or lofty. Of course, its most recent application as an adjec-tive is to aircraft, to something per-taining to or designed for, or operating from or against aircraft.

Within the last decade, "aerial" as a noun has been used to designate the elevated conductor portion of a condenser antenna in radio construc-tion, but the pronunciation of the word has been altered so that while the a is long, the c seems to have been eliminated. The proper pronunciation for a-e'-ri-al is with the second syllable accented. Sound first a as in late, e as in eve, i as in it, and second a as "Aerial voyages are becoming daily

The Law Enforcement Commission

ROBABLY the first public reaction to the announcement by President Hoover of his appointees to the National Law Enforcement Commission will be a sharp and shrewd scrutiny of the records of the ten men and one woman on the question of prohibition. This reception of the announcement, while inevitable, is unfortunate. It is inevitable because, despite the care with which the President has in every utterance made clear the precise nature of the board, the public has persisted in looking upon the inquiry as primarily one into the merits of the prohibition issue. There is no justification for this assumption. The commission is created for the explicit purpose of inquiring into "the entire question of law enforcement and organization of justice." Prohibition enters into the problem, but may not prove to be even its

We do not propose to echo or to further the vulgar error by attempting to define the probable positions of members of this distinguished commission on this bitterly contested question. There are names which will instantly be recognized as those of conscientious wets. There are others dry enough to evoke the vociferous applause of the Anti-Saloon League. There are several whose mental convictions are known only to themselves, and whose personal practices only to their intimate associates.

But more important than any question as to personal opinions or prejudices is the reputation of these appointees for patriotism, good citizenship, ability, and, above all, for the willingness to set above any mere individual bias the endeavor to ascertain truth. Both Mr. Wickersham and Mr. Baker have been described as opponents of the prohibition law. Judge Kenyon and Miss Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, are recognized as its friends. But in the case of neither is great importance to be ascribed to this preconception of the right or wrong of a single issue involved in the inquiry into the administration of law. It is rather the high degree of intellectual capacity, and the ability manifested in earlier activities to maintain toward public questions a judicial and a patriotic viewpoint, which determines the fitness of the members of this group for the important duty assigned to them.

President Hoover has made wise selections. His was the original conception of the inquiry, and he has placed its conduct in able hands. It may be a surprise to many to know that Congress has made no appropriation for the expenditures necessary for carrying out this inquiry, and that all of these appointees have accepted their appointments without specific knowledge of how the inquiry is to be financed. It is, of course, reasonable to suppose that this neglect will be repaired by Congress during the present

Northern Rhodesia Astir

THE man who could imagine taming the wilds of south-central Africa and carving the vast tropical haunts of savage tribes into the orderly adjuncts of a civilized empire was no ordinary dreamer. And Cecil Rhodes remains the outstanding figure of South African history. But it needs all the vivid imagination that Mr. Rhodes possessed to complete the work which he began-to devise a system whereby the thinly scattered white settlers shall live happily side by side with the numerous native tribesmen in some of the most remote of British possessions.

A touch of modern machinery among the backward races works wonders in the way of leveling up, and that method is already in full operation in Southern Rhodesia-the real Rhodes country-where 2500 miles of railway and large metal mining plants have shown how quick-moving industries can speed up the languorous tropics. The black races are becoming increasingly prosperous, and the Government is seriously trying to establish satisfactory relations between them and the white settlers

But in the huge 250,000 square mile tract of Northern Rhodesia, with a still more backward black population and a still smaller sprinkling of whites-little more than 5000-the problem is yet in its preliminary stages. The territory has attracted little attention, lying as it does to the north of the famous Victoria Falls and served with a single railway pushing up 800 miles into the highlands. But now come reports that Northern Rhodesia is contemplating the founding of a new capital in the more northerly section of the territory, to cope with mining developments in that area. In view of the constant agitation in Southern Rhodesia for amalgamation with its neighbor beyond the Zambesi, with the central capital probably at Bulawayo, and in view of the recent activities of the Hilton Young Commission in formulating a new and quasi-federated status for the British East African territories of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika to the north, the proposal may not be without its political interest But from the immediate economic standpoint it indicates an industrial activity capable of bringing new white settlers into the territory and of raising the condition of the native tribesmen to the level reached by their brothers in the south. Whether such economic advancement will point the way to bringing these two unattached and relationship with each other, or separately with the South African Union below, or with the proposed Central East African Union above, is perhaps the main question for those who would like to see the political ordering of these vast and remote tracts take a more tangible form.

A New Basis for Rail Valuations

DERHAPS there were no more surprised individuals than the railway executives themselves as they read and pondered the decision rendered by the United States Supreme Court in the matter of recapture of earnings of the St. Louis & O'Fallon Railway, a short line serving some industries in and about St. Louis. Perusal of dispatches indicated that the Supreme Court had upheld the theories for which the railroads long had contended-namely, the cost-of-reproduction basis of evaluating the

Just how far-reaching will be the effect of the decision cannot be immediately foreseen. The case was termed the "greatest lawsuit in history" because of the billions of dollars in rail values involved in this case of one of the smallest railways, which was universally regarded as a test for the valuation of all the railways. Basically, it was not a case in which the theories of valuation, as such, were directly involved. The question was whether the "recapture" of one-half of the road's earnings above 6 per cent, as provided for in the Transportation Act, constituted "confiscation." Whether the road was subject to a recapture of its earnings could not, however, be determined unless a basis of evaluating the road was prescribed.

Railway attorneys intervening in the case, as well as those representing the O'Fallon road, maintained that the cost of reproduction was the only equitable method to pursue; counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission urged the claims of the commission-namely, that the value be that of 1914, plus certain additions and minor depreciations. But the Supreme Court ruled that cost of reproduction at prevailing prices is an element which must receive consideration in determining railway values.

Theoretically, the literal effect of such a decision would be to increase the value of the railways from approximately $25,000,000,000 to nearly $40,000,000,000. If the commerce commission were to make rates to yield a "fair return" upon such a value, substantial readjustments would be necessary. The immediate effect appears to be that the hazard of recapture of one-half the net earnings above 6 per cent in the case of the few roads which would be subject to this, even under the commission's low valuations, will now be wholly removed if the cost of reproduction theory is to obtain. The next effect will be to wipe out as futile the long years of work, at millions of dollars expense, in evaluating the railways, at the insistence of the senior Senator La Follette. back in 1913. Unless the work thus far done can be revised to the new methods of evaluating, the merits of the earlier work will have been largely destroyed.

Homes and Parks

TT IS pleasant to contemplate that the American people, in spite of their recently enlarged interest in economic and industrial expansion, are still concerned with the building of homes and the development of parks. Dr. John M. Gries, chief of the Division of building and housing, of the Department of Commerce, recently reported a growing tendency on the part of people generally to own their own homes. Accompanying this tendency there was said to be in progress a pilgrimage on the part of home owners away from the city and toward the suburb-a movement made possible by the rapid progress in motor transportation. The desire for outdoor recreational facilities has also influenced many people to forsake the city. Dr. Gries reported that the percentage of families owning their own homes in the sixty-eight largest cities of the United States had increased during the 1910-1920 census period. It was also intimated that the figures for 1920-1930 would show a still further increase of home owners. It was affirmed also that home construction constituted a vital part of America's $7,000,000,000 annual building program

Characteristic also of the appreciation of the American people for the more cultural aspects of national prosperity is the fact that the area of national parks is being enlarged annually. The Department of the Interior recently made public a statement to the effect that the national park system had been enlarged during 1928 to 12,113 square miles, an increase of nearly 200 square miles, through the addition of lands to existing parks and the establishment of new ones. The Yellowstone National Park was increased by the addition of seventy-eight square miles. Other parks to be enlarged included the Acadia National Park, on the coast of Maine, the Grand Teton National Park of Wyoming, and the Lassen Volcanic National Park, in Northern California. Bryce Canyon National Park, comprising some twenty-two square miles, was newly established. Innumerable park projects are under way clear across the country. There is scarcely a state or a county or a metropolitan area that is not beautifying its landscape with parks of one kind or another. And all this is in addition to the provisions so generously made for the upkeep and extension of national parks.

Home ownership and park development reflect a solidarity of national character that has in it elements of endurance. It cannot be said that a nation is unduly preoccupied with the purely economic aspects of national development when its citizens invest so much of their individual and collective effort in the maintenance of homes and parks.

A Welcome Challenge

ROBABLY the announcement of no sporting competition causes as great an international stir as does that of the challenge for the America's Cup. This the New York Yacht Club has just received from the Royal Ulster Yacht Club of Bangor, Ire., on behalf of Sir Thomas J. Lipton for a series of races in September. 1930. It is the fifth time since 1899 that Sir Thomas has sought to win the blue ribbon rather solitary British outposts into political | trophy of the yachting world, and as he has always proven to be a fine sportsman in defeat, the yachting fraternity may rest assured that the races of 1930 will be conducted upon the highest possible plane of sportsmanship.

While the America's Cup has practically no monetary value in itself, it is probably the most highly prized international trophy in existence. For this there are at least two reasons. One of them is the fact that competition for it is of such an expensive nature that it has become an exceedingly costly matter to challenge as well as to defend the cup. Another is the fact that, as it has been successfully defended by the United States ever since it was won from Great Britain by the famous schooner America in the race around the Isle of Wight in 1851, the first challenger to win it will gain great renown. American yachtsmen are, naturally, very keen to defend the trophy again in 1930; but it is safe to say that they are practically unanimous in the wish that, when and if the cup is ever lifted from its present resting place, the honor may go to Sir Thomas Lipton. The sportsmanship which he has always shown and the determination to persevere in the face of big odds have earned him a place of high esteem among the yachtsmen of the world. The handicap of having to cross the Atlantic Ocean and meet a defender in its home waters, and the fact that the trophy has stayed seventy-nine years in America, are conditions that will give Sir Thomas and the Shamrock V the severest of competition. It will. however, be the wish of every amateur skipper that the races be sailed under the best of conditions and that the best boat win.

Mr. Capper, Mr. Green and the Tariff

CENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER of Kansas, leader of the farm bloc contingent in the upper house of Congress, fails to find much in the proposed Hawley-Smoot tariff bill of actual benefit to agriculturists. He insists that if it is the sincere desire of national lawmakers to place agriculture on a basis of economic equality with other American industries, some material changes must be made in the schedules outlined in the pending measure. *

Speaking for the American Federation of Labor, of which he is the president, William Green opposes, specifically, the proposed increase in the sugar duty. This, he insists, is unjustifiable and indefensible. Upon this point Senator Capper and Mr. Green are in complete agreement, both attempting to show that the higher import tax would impose an unfair and needless burden upon millions of American consumers. The protection which it is sought to afford, Mr. Green points out, would be enjoyed. by investors in an industry which employs women, children and Mexican labor at "indecent wages and under intolerable conditions." He insists that the great mass of American workers are unwilling to be taxed for the purpose of protecting an industry which resorts to such practices. "In behalf of working men and women affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, I register my protest against the proposed increase in the sugar tariff schedule," Mr. Green says.

Senator Capper, solicitous for the economic welfare of the people of the great farming section which he represents, lays a more sweeping. indictment against those sections of the bill which deal with duties on agricultural prod-ucts. He embraces, also, the sugar schedule, which he insists will impose an unreasonable, burden upon agriculturists as a whole, for the questionable benefit of comparatively few who are engaged in sugar beet production. His chief objections to the measure as a whole are that while it proposes to increase some of the duties on farm products, it offsets those possible or theoretical benefits by placing higher duties on many of the commodities which the farmers

Specifically, Senator Capper cites the proposed duty on building materials, particularly lumber, shingles and cement. He remarks, perhaps facetiously, that he cannot discover how the doubling of the duty on paint-brush handles is to benefit those for whom he speaks. There are, he admits, some additional benefits to the farmers in the higher duties which it is proposed to levy upon the meat of wild or semi-wild animals which may be imported. He expresses gratitude for these concessions.

But the Kansas Senator seriously approves the proposal to tax more highly imports of beef and pork, as well as corn. Yet with these, he insists, the measure fails to assure to agriculture the benefits to which it is entitled. His attitude toward the tariff is a natural and logical one. and is easily understood. It needs no explanation. It is that of all those who feel themselves justified in assuming the rôle of special advocate for a constituency which demands particular forms of legislation. It is seldom, when an attempt is made to revise tariff schedules, either up or down, that all are satisfied.

The background of baseball that Walter Johnson has enjoyed enables him to speak with authority on any part of the game. Hence when he says that "the lively baseball was the worst thing that ever happened to the game," sports followers sit up and take notice. Base stealing, the squeeze play, and many of the other finer points in baseball are fast becoming a lost art ecause of the lively ball. Here is something for sports officials to think about seriously, for there are reasons enough for suspecting that the fans may soon tire of too much heavy hitting while they will never cease to appreciate the skill and strategy required under normal conditions to win a baseball contest.

Of 962 petty officers and men entitled to a daily ration of rum on board the British battleship Rodney during the fleet exercises in the Mediterranean, no less than 613 refused it, preferring to draw the threepence per day "saving" allowed in lieu of this drink. This is a big change from twenty-five years ago, when 10 per cent was considered an unusually large proportion of a British warship's complement preferring to draw money allowance instead of rum.

Laurier House

OTTIWA WE DROVE up to a weathered brick house stand-ing on the corner of one of the principal residential streets of Ottawa, passed along a lilae-bordered walk to the door and were admitted to a high-ceiled central hallway. Footmen in conventional evening clothes directed us to the cloakroom, presented us with tiny envelopes containing the names of our respective dinner partners, and led us to the reception room. As our names were announced, the Prime Minister came forward with a boyish smile and a warm handelasp. Introductions all around, a few humorous sallies and laughter to brush away formality, and we took up our march to the dining room and our appointed places.

There were fourteen of us, although the profusion of lights and flowers down the center of the table restricted the view of our immediate neighbors. The Diplomatist's wife on my left proved a charming conversationalist and entertained me with the discussion of many subjects, including Canadian weather and skiing. The butler interposed with a platter of chicken fricassee and in the vocal pause I caught the words of our host:

We rejoined the ladies and were conducted on a tour of discovery. First we inspected the big rose-decorated drawing-room, complimented our host on his admirable taste, then gathered around the center table while, with unaffected pride, he opened a golden casket to show the golden key and illuminated scroll representing the conferring of the freedom of a great English city. There were other souvenirs of similar ceremonies, prompting the Author to suggest the collecting of "freedoms" as a new and fascinating hobby.

Then we were invited to the third floor, a few mounting by a humble elevator run by the P. M. himself, the rest by the stairs, and congregating again in a homey sitting room filled with bright chintzes and quaint curios from the ends of the earth. Random questions and brief explanations that afforded glimpses into the bypaths of a statesman's life, and we crossed the hall into a long, loftlike room completely lined with books and centered by

Neither Presperous Ner Bankrupt

To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Nothing is more fascinating in the modern world than its complexity. It is only the superficial observer who can say with complete conviction, "It is so, here lies the truth." For those delving below the surface, the more one knows of a subject the more difficult it seems to form a comprehensive judgment regarding it.

This pertains especially to countries and nations. After the World War, I was often asked by my English and American friends whether or not Germany felt-this or that during the great struggle. I could only tell them what certain classes or movements or individuals, with whom I was in touch, thought and felt, not what the nation as a whole experienced emotionally. It is indeed only on special and rare occasions, when feeling runs high, and when a nation temporarily stands for one will, one feeling, that life becomes entirely simple, that there is only one point of view, and that everything else is absurdly irrelevant.

These thoughts occurred to me when reading two articles in The Christian Science Monitor of Feb. 27 and 28, 1929. In these articles the writer declares that, in spite of all that the German Government and the German nokesmen at the conference in Paris may say to the con-

As I read these articles, I saw in my mind's eye the meagerly paid officials, trying to live up to a certain standard of decent living and modest comfort; and I saw the unfortunate "Kleinrentner" who have lost their entire savings in the cataclysm which followed inflation, and who are thankful enough if they are able to keep warm in winter, turn and return their ancient clothes a dozen times and live on bread, potatoes and corn coffee. Whole classes of society are impoverished, especially the middle classes, the aristocracy and the formerly well-to-do farmers. Even the manual workers, although their wages have siderably increased, say that they are not so well off as be ore the war with the exception, perhaps, of the unskilled workman and the young unmarried man.

And yet there are undoubtedly a number of flourishing concerns in the country, the big cities have a highly prosperous appearance, the banks have done exceedingly well and the savings banks show a continuous increase in the osits How is this to be explained? It is simply that land in which to invest their money, and it is these people means, captains of industry, directors, film stars and others, who spend their money in the shops of luxury, dinin the smart restaurants, and frequent the theaters and bars. The peasants, too, in some parts, working fourteen hours a day, except in the winter months, save money which they deposit in the savings bank. The large wareouses and some fortunate shopkeepers can be said to be making money also.

Yet all these form but a minority, and while no doubt they attract the eye of the stranger and the statistician, to most of us who are daily witnesses of the struggle of thousand's to make both ends meet and to give their children a sound education—especially now that all their capi-tal is gone—they form a much less impressive sight than a casual observer would imagine. Remembering the daily struggles of whole sections of the community, thinking of the many who are impoverished, and the few with large banking accounts, it hurts not a little to read constantly in the foreign papers of German prosperity.

Human nature being what it is, we should discount both views. Somewhere between the "prosperity" cry of the reditor nations and the "bankruptcy" wail of the debtor doubtless lies the truth.

That Germany has made the recovery she has, after overcoming in turn defeat, revolution and inflation, is remarkable enough without anyone going to the extreme of calling attention to her as a prosperous country. She has number of prospercus industries and numberless imand spiritual asset forgotten in more prosperous days, and Cermany means to make good in spite of it all DOROTHY COUNTESS YON MOLIKE.

What Would Washington Wish?

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR Newspaper columns are already discussing methods of celebrating, two years hence, the two hundredth anniersary of George Washington's birth. In 1927, Calvin Coolidge's supervision, a national commission was inaugurated to consider how to celebrate most worthily that event. Statues, structures of various sorts, songs, speeches, are all suggestions selected by sundry statesmen or societies.

Thus far, however, no paper has proposed the pertinent question, "What would George himself wish?"

His desires, it known, allouid certainly be our first consideration. Fortunately our Nation is not left. in doubt in the matter.

Listen to his very own words, "My first wish is to see that plague of mankind, war, banished from the earth!"

And, moreover, as a reason for his ardent delire, he affirms, "Overgrown military establishments are, under any form of government, inauspicious to liberty, and are to be regarded as particularly hostile to republican lib-erty!" Thus opined our first great general. Our latest, Pershing, has added thereto, when speaking in New York. of world disarmament, "Unless some such move be made, we may we'll ask ourselves whether civilization does not really reach a point where it begins to destroy itself; and whether we are thus doomed to go headlong down through destructive war and darkness to barbarism!

The United States has already taken an initial step in the desired direction by declaring the outlawry of war. The Treaty of Versailles, as Mr. Lloyd George recently pointed out, agreed that the Allies would disarm after Germ disarmed; Russia and other countries have expressed their willingness. What then would be more appropriate, under our present noble President, a member of the Society of Friends, than arranging by universal agreement to dis-arm, and thus fulfill in the next intervening two years Washington's first wish to banish that plague of mankind

The will to agree will free the world from the idjocy

"Lives Up to the Loftiest Ideals" TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

I am writing to you to give expression to my warm apciation of The Christian Science Monitor. For a number years during which I have been living in China and India this excellent newspaper has become a very great friend to me.

I do not believe there is anything worth while in human activities—regardless of nations, classes or creeds—that is not brought to the attention of Monitor readers in a way that expresses and enlists good will

It really hardly matters at all that we receive the Moni-er here a few weeks after its publication; the weekly arriving bundle provides the regular daily paper, so that we have our daily copy just as those living in places where daily delivery of mail is Insured. I admire the Monitor as being expressive of the greatest power for good in the world. Openly and sincerely it stands for all that is great and noble and good, and en riches our lives, and it lives up to the loftiest ideals, not the least of which are prohibition and world peace. Bombay, India. WERNER REIST.

Progress in Oregon

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Under date of April 16, 1929, there appeared a note on the editorial page of the Monitor as follows:

Another dangerous habit has received a jolt, it now being a sdemeanor in Idaho to toss lighted cigarettes from an auto-dule. The law in question should do much toward the convation of property. I would like to call to your attention a similar Oregon so that Oregon could have credit also for progress in Section 27, Chapter 388, General Laws of Oregon, 1927, Section 27. Unlawful to throw away lighted matches, cigarettes, etc.—Penalty.

It shall be unlawful, during the closed season, for anyone to throw away any lighted tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, natches, firectackers or other lighted material on any forest land, private road, public highway or railroad right-of-way within this State. Excrome operating a public conveyance shall post a copy of this section in a conspicuous place within the smoking compariments of such conveyance. Anyone violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemensor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $50.

This section was approved by the Governor on March 3.

1927. The closed season referred to is from May to September of each year.
